

State report likens hazing to child abuse

by Arlene Surprenant

Hazing incidents that took place last summer at Camp Wakuta were found to be "reportable acts of child abuse" in a report released Wednesday by the state Department of Education. In addition, department investigators found that copies of the hazing laws were not distributed to members of the Wilmington High football team prior to camp nor did the athletes have a clear understanding of the hazing laws, a significant fact since "upperclassmen were placed in charge of each of the student cabins at the football camp."

The report is the result of a complaint filed by local resident Anne Linehan on December 4. In her complaint, Linehan claimed the Wilmington School System was not in compliance with the state's anti-hazing laws. The report upheld Linehan's charge after state officials interviewed various school administrators, five football coaches, several football players, and school committeemen, and members of the police department on January 8.

The report pointed out areas of compliance and noncompliance, as well as problem areas which may have contributed to the hazing incidents. The report states, though staff members are under a mandate to report hazing incidents, they failed to report them to the Department of Social Services when they first learned hazing took place. The report also gives other examples of non-compliance:

- The high school handbook, which contains a copy of the anti-hazing law, was not distributed to every student until the end of last October.

- Prior to the fall of 1992, copies of the hazing laws were not distributed to secondary school students, and school administrators did not receive written acknowledgement of that distribution from the designated officer of each school team, organization, and group as required.

- While there is evidence that the athletic director and coaching staff advised students "generally" about proper behavior at camp, they did not meet the law's requirements.

- Observers of the hazing incidents did not report them to an appropriate law enforcement official as required by law.

Under "problem areas" the report focuses on the following key points:

- There is evidence indicating, that in recent years prior to 1992, underclassmen at the camp were subjected to actions by upperclassmen "that were on the borderline of the legal definition of hazing. While not clearly acts of hazing, the acceptance of these behaviors increased the possibilities for more serious harrassment to occur."

- Most of the staff directly responsible for the camp "did not have a clear understanding of the hazing laws, and did not consider the acts that occurred at the camp to be hazing."

- "While many of the hazing incidents took place during the day in between practises, some hazing incidents also took place at night when there was no staff supervision."

- One borderline hazing incident that occurred at the 1992 camp "should have generated concerns about potential further and more serious acts of hazing, and indicated to staff that additional supervision might be warranted."

- The principal was not involved with the planning for the football camp nor was he interviewed by the superintendent prior to issuance of the appeals decision as he should have been. "Given the serious nature of the hazing that took place, the justification for the former superintendent's appeals decisions is unclear."

- Some observers of the hazing were not recommended for discipline. The justification was if they had reported what they had seen, they would have been in "danger."

- The offer of counseling services for students, through the special needs department, was "inadequate." "Particular attention should have been paid to providing off-site counseling intervention to the primary perpetrators of the hazing, as per the high school principal's recommendation, and the victims."

- Once the hazing incidents became public, the school committee should have discussed fully its role as policy-makers, including the role of the high school, to ensure compliance with the law and to find out why the district had not complied with the law.

The report states that the system has come into compliance with all requirements of the law since the hazing incidents came to the attention of the school committee.

It also states that the principal's recommendations for discipline "were consistent" with the consequences for hazing outlined in the student handbook. The report praises the system for including the anti-hazing law in the handbook and, with the exception of this past year, distributing the handbook at the beginning of each school year.

Under the complaint process, both Linehan and the school superintendent have until February 12 to appeal the report's findings. If the school system accepts the report's findings and intends to comply with them, the superintendent must notify the Department of Education by February 26.

The Department of Education ruled that the Wilmington system should distribute the handbook to all students in September, make sure copies of the anti-hazing law are distributed through coaches and advisors to each student participant at the beginning of the school year, and clarify the disciplinary consequences for hazing to assure that both perpetrators and observers of future incidents will be subject to discipline. The department also suggested the town provide professional development on the hazing laws to staff members; the high school principal be involved in all decisions involving students, including activities of all teams; and the superintendent meet with the principal when he receives a disciplinary appeal from a parent.

Linehan told this paper she was satisfied with the report.

"The report speaks for itself and is only as good as the action of the school committee and the superintendent. I have every faith they will follow through on the recommendations," she said.

The end of the recall

Recall effort goes down in flames

by Arlene Surprenant

Wilmington's first recall went down in defeat Tuesday as residents voted more than two to one to keep school committee members Linda McMenimen and Dr. Shirley Callan in office.

A total of 3,843 citizens, two less than in last April's election, braved the cold Tuesday to cast their vote. Of that total, 2,544 were against the recall of Dr. Callan and 2,607 were against the recall of McMenimen; 1,146 favored the recall of Dr. Callan and 1,058 supported the recall of McMenimen.

On hand at town hall after the polls closed were the winning candidates as well as their opponents Bob Surran and Suzanne Spirits Rooney. None of the candidate votes were tallied by election workers since the election had failed. Kathi Gillis and Selectmen Dan Ballou, who led the fight to recall the two board members, could not be located in the crowd.

The successful incumbents were jubilant when the results were announced a little after 9 p.m. They attributed their win to the outpouring of support from a silent majority.

"You were all there when it really counted; we won't let you down," promised Callan.

"Truly we've been vindicated tonight," added McMenimen, who was overwhelmed at one point by a bouquet of red, white, and blue balloons with the word "integrity" printed on one.

Callan told this paper, "I love my town and I'm proud of it." She later added the best part of the election is that it shows people do care about youngsters in this community.

In answer to a question on how to begin the healing process, McMenimen noted, "We have to begin healing as a school board and a town."

Both Surran and Rooney praised the recall process that allowed voters to have the final say.

"We went through the democratic process. The main thing we have to do now is get behind the new superintendent and put the whole thing behind us," Surran told the Town Crier. He added "we had a huge turnout of people that got involved; I hope the level of support stays up."

"At least the election gave a message that this process can happen," said Rooney. She went on to add, "The message is they wanted to stop the hazing and the media circus; it's not a vote of confidence for Shirley or Linda."

We would like to express our gratitude to the folks at Wilmington Woods Nursing Care Center for the kind help they provided to our neighbor, Helen Hamilton, during her stay over the last several months. We would also like to thank Helen's friends and other neighbors for the tremendous outpouring of support in helping us bring Helen back to live in her home once again.

Board close on sewer article

by Arlene Surprenant

Members of the Sewer Financing Advisory Committee are close to agreement on an article for Wilmington's annual town meeting spelling out a funding formula for future sewer projects.

On Monday, members agreed to the need to change the current legislation, which authorizes the town to charge up to 50 percent of a project's cost to sewer users in the form of betterments. In addition, members agreed to the need for some betterments, but suggested they be capped to prevent anyone from carrying too big a burden financially, especially with government grants drying up for such projects.

Many suggested the town pick up part of the cost either through the tax bill or some other method. Some felt the funding for each project that comes before town meeting should be wide-open and debated on the floor. Others felt there needed to be some specific guidelines covering all projects.

Chairman George Allan noted that surrounding towns don't seem to have as many legal restraints as Wilmington in paying for the construction of sewers. He pointed out that the town gets two benefits from sewers: a general benefit such as trunk lines, interceptors, and pumping stations that the whole town benefits from, and a specific benefit in the form of laterals that come down a homeowner's street making it possible for him to hook into the sewer system.

Some, like Town Manager Michael Caira and Ring Avenue resident Tony Capuano, felt it's only fair to share some of the burden through the tax rate since sewers protect the town's groundwater and reportedly benefit all.

"I don't think we should tie down how the town's share is to be paid," said Allan. He proposed voters make that decision each time a sewer project comes up for a vote at town meeting so a project can be adapted to the times and a particular situation.

Arthur Spear disagreed. He said he favors some guidelines otherwise pressure groups at town meeting could unfairly influence a vote.

Park Street resident Bob Cronan went along with Spear saying "to leave it wide-open is courting disaster." He later suggested the general benefit cost go on the sewer rate so sewer users would bear the greater cost. Caira argued that, under that scenario, costs would fall right back on the same people who are bearing the burden now.

Paul Niman, superintendent of the Water and Sewer Department, suggested working out a bylaw that would clearly define the method of payment rather than relying on legislation.

"It's never going to feel equitable to everyone in every neighborhood," said member Joan O'Rourke, who favors sewers.

When Capuano argued that he preferred to first get all MWRA towns together to meet with that agency to see where the rates are going and how to reduce the costs for hard-pressed homeowners, O'Rourke argued, "we have to have something in place for when the time's right." Others said while they favor Capuano's suggestion, the committee's only purpose is to come up with an equitable formula that will stand the test of time.

Capuano still targeted the MWRA.

"I got burnt with sewerage. If you have a septic system you're not going to hook to sewers. People don't want to increase their cost of living," said Capuano. Later he added industries should pick up more of the cost because they have more money.

While some favored a flat fee to users, perhaps based on the cost of an eight inch lateral, Caira main-

Election heats up

by Arlene Surprenant

The race for eight open seats on Wilmington town boards is heating up. Twelve candidates have already taken out nomination papers for the April 17 election.

The hottest race so far seems to be for two three-year seats on the board of selectmen. In the running are incumbent Mark Haldane of Arlene Avenue, Diane Allan of Corey Avenue, Tony Capuano of Ring Avenue, John Lynch of Cushing Drive, Bruce MacDonald of West Street, and Tom Siracusa of Edward Road.

There are three seats up for grabs on the Wilmington School Committee, two for three year terms and one for two years. In the contest are incumbent Peggy Kane of Hanover Street and Vincent Decidue of Beeching Avenue.

In the race for one five year seat on the housing authority are Charles Fiore Jr. of Third Avenue and Judson Miller of Cedar Street. Seeking re-election to one five year seat and one two year seat on the redevelopment authority are incumbents Sidney Kaizer of Cottage Avenue and Dennis Volpe of Reed Street.

Residents have until February 25 to take out papers. Candidates must then obtain signatures from at least 50 registered voters and turn in the papers by the March 1 deadline.

Teachers hope state arbitrator will move new contract along submitted by the Tewksbury Teachers Assoc.

On February 4, state mediator Diane Zahr will conduct the first mediation session between the Tewksbury Teachers Association (TTA) and the Tewksbury School Committee.

At the last bargaining session on January 11, both parties agreed to file for mediation in order to break the five month deadlock. Last year's contract that provided for no teachers raises expired August 31, 1992.

On February 3 the Teachers Association will continue its practice to picket School Committee meetings until there is progress at the bargaining table.

"Length of the contract and salaries are major issues in these negotiations" TTA President Gerald Rideout commented. "We should know whether the School Committee is serious about negotiating a reasonable and timely contract by the end of this first mediation session."

"Tewksbury teachers are becoming extremely impatient. We sincerely hope that the mediation process will jump start negotiations. We expect to make some serious collective decisions if mediation does not work quickly and efficiently." Rideout added, "Time is running out."

When asked if there could possibly be an escalation of teacher job actions, Rideout explained that the union will not rule out any job actions. "As bargaining progresses or regresses, we will communicate with our people and at some point decide on which job action is appropriate. What ever we do, we will decide collectively and democratically."

TTA negotiations chairperson, Anthony Blandini, indicated that if the education reform bill passes with adequate funding for Tewksbury, future labor strife could be averted. "I'm hoping that this School Committee takes control of its responsibility and negotiates a reasonable contract with us. If the School Committee continues to follow directives from other town officials concerning contract talks with school employees, we will experience continued labor difficulties," Blandini said.

Hospital pays

After years of effort, Tewksbury has finally received payment from the state of $69,659 for a sewer line hook-up for Tewksbury Hospital.

Town Manager David Cressman said the town has been trying to get the sewer hook-up fee since before he arrived on the job in 1988. The line was connected in 1987, he said, and the state has owed ever since.

Town Treasurer Warren Carey said the payment to the town sewer account kept being put off, since the line was installed, and only paid off last month, on January 19. Carey said the state never refused to pay the fee, but delays kept adding onto delays.

Hats Off

Tewksbury Rotary Club presented its monthly Hats Off awards for the month of January to Marilyn Garrett and Michael Odiorne last Thursday. The awards recognize outstanding academic achievement among Tewksbury Memorial High School students. Presenting the pair to the Rotarians was Libby Gaffney, right.

ABOUT STATE TAX REFUNDS

So you overpaid your state taxes and got a refund check. Now what? How should that money be handled on your federal income tax return? Do you have to pay taxes on it?

Here's the basic rule: If you claimed your state taxes as an itemized deduction on the 1991 federal return, then the refund is taxable and should be declared as income on your 1992 return, due in April. Be aware that the Internal Revenue Service knows about the refund because the state tax agency reported it, if it was $10 or more.

But the refund is not taxable if you didn't claim the state taxes as an itemized deduction - if, for instance, you filed Form 1040EZ or even the short form 1040A, which doesn't allow itemized deductions; or if you didn't claim it on the long form 1040; or if you were subject to the Alternative Minimum Tax on 1991 earnings and thus were unable to deduct the state tax.

Counselors Week Feb.1-6

Governor Weld has proclaimed February 1-6, 1993 as Massachusetts School Counselors Week in celebration of National School Counseling Week sponsored by the American School Counselor Association. This celebration established and emphasizes the value and importance of the role of the counselor in the school as the leading school professional who facilitates and supports the educational program and development of our nation's most precious resource. America's children. School counselors throughout Mass. and the nation will be celebrating their contributions to their school, communities and states under this year's national theme:

School Counselors: Entrepreneurs of Individuals Exploring, Expanding, Emerging.

During this commemorative week, school counselors throughout America will be emphasizing how school counselors assist students to explore their worlds with the innumerable opportunities available to each of them for discovering their potentials: to expand their horizons of knowledge of themselves and their environments; and to learn how to apply this knowledge and potential to emerge in the 21st Century as holistic and healthy young adults. Education today not only provides skill development in reading, writing and arithmetic, and the practical and fine arts, but curriculum also includes instruction and counseling for the exploration and development of person self awareness and individual human potential.

During the celebration of School Counseling Week both in Massachusetts and throughout the nation, it is emphasized that counseling programs operate most effectively with the involvement, encouragement and participation of all members of the community. Counselors urge everyone to join in and to work together for all children so that we may emerge as a healthier community and nation in the 21st Century.

frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

Quite frankly I can't figure out the problem over there at the Swain School, headquarters for local cable television WCTV. Maybe it's asbestos flakes in the coffee or something, but the pharisees on the local cable board had better shed this paranoia over political programming or the board of selectmen should shake the cable board.

The most recent controversy came when cable city pulled a fast one and at the last possible moment aired a smelly piece of political propaganda that would have made any devious political consultant grim from ear to ear. There's another phrase for it, but put politely the political commercial — don't even try to call it a documentary — making love to the resurrected Shirley Callan, the school board member who you just can't shake like a bad cold. The puff piece was produced by Sandy Curtin and Cheryl Soderquist, Callan disciples and among her most zealous devotees.

There's actually a real irony here. For a time local cable, in utter violation of the law and the station's own mandate, would treat political programming like tuberculosis. Forget the problem with this form of democratic standpoint, the rejecting of political programming was pure stupidity given the fact that politics and government comprises a large chunk of our lives and what we debate daily.

Elevate our pious local cable board to control the national networks and I guess we'd have to kiss goodbye David Brinkley, Larry King Live and the whole lot at CNN. Surely the McLaughlin Group would be the first to go.

But in Wilmington there's always been this hypocritical aversion to politics. We pretend to despise the practice while espousing its tactics at the same time. That's why there's a vivid intellectual dishonesty in the board president's explanation that "public access is really public access." How then does he explain that the pro-Callan puff piece, came like a thief in the night and that no public information had been offered as to the opportunity to produce a political program in the first place, thus giving the opposing side the due opportunity to rebut.

Local cable did start to come of age recently thanks to Steve Sabounjian and his hard-working comrades who are committed to a local cable channel offering substantive programming. The station began to air a political talk show featuring yours truly and other such political junkies (I guess this column will end that contract). It was a step forward and people offering opposing views were welcome.

That's the basic tenet of the local access station which the board of directors has never fully understood. The board is caretaker for our cable station which we pay for through cable television charges. If you ask to go on the air with a program and are denied because of its content, you should get in your car and head directly to Woburn District Court. It doesn't matter how political the show is or what your theme is. If you want to produce a 30 minute segment on the virtues of legalizing marijuana, the courts have ruled that it's your right, just as its your peer's right to appear after you and oppose that view.

Next Monday evening Kathy Gillis will address the board of selectmen on the issue of fair access, which has again raised its head at WCTV. The selectmen should respond by instructing the town manager to meet directly with the cable board and its paid staff and remind them of two things; their basic purpose and the Constitution of the United States. Following that, the board of selectmen should seek out qualified cable board members who appreciate and respect the virtues of local cable access.

Cable's expanding impact

by Larz F. Neilson

Elections in Wilmington will never be the same.

Tuesday's recall election was a landmark in more ways than one. Besides being the town's first recall election, it was the first time that candidates or advocates used cable television.

The change came about because of what has been going on at the Swain School. It's called Wilmington Community Television, or WCTV. The medium has been with us for a few years now, but things are changing. People are discovering that they can produce their own programs.

For only a $10 membership fee, residents can join WCTV and learn how to produce television programs. And while the programs may not rival the Superbowl in audience or budget, the impact locally is certainly measurable.

Last week, a locally-produced program became controversial when it delved into the matter of the hazing incident and the recall election. "In Search of Excellence" is produced by Cheryl Soderquist and Sandy Curtin, two local women who have been producing their own local program for the past year and a half.

As the recall election approached, they decided to put together a program on the issue. They drew on the station's library of tapes of public meetings of the school committee and the selectmen, and took a look at the student handbook and the state hazing law.

Reaction to the program was almost instantaneous.

Cathy Gillis, a leader of the recall effort, charged that the program was biased, and that the station had a policy against taking sides on political issues.

In the past, the station's board of directors had rejected an offer by Town Crier columnist Kevin Sowyrda to broadcast live coverage from the polls on election night. The board felt it would be "too political."

Well, the board has a few new faces and has learned a lot, especially about the First Amendment.

"We've learned that public access is really public access," said WCTV President Michael Niestepski. "We're the highway for the people. We don't tell you what kind of car to drive."

The only restrictions about what WCTV will broadcast are that it has to be non-commercial with no obscenity. Other than that, the only limitation is the ability to produce a tape that can be used on the air. WCTV will not tape the show for you, but they will teach you how to do it, if you become a member.

On Thursday night, 48 hours after seeing the Curtin-Soderquist program, Cathy Gillis was watching her own tape on WCTV. She had a very quick education in what community cable TV is all about. On Thursday, she recorded a tape, and it was aired.

That tape was the first of its type on Wilmington cable. Many people just didn't know that the option was open for broadcasting their own tape.

This in fact is a major complaint that Cathy Gillis has. "The way they advertised themselves, I never believed I could put anything political on TV," she said. She also charged that she did not have equal access, since she did not have access to the equipment. She had to find someone with a camcorder to record her message.

In the future, probably the immediate future, local candidates will be taking advantage of the technology at hand. Viewers — those who subscribe to cable — will have a choice between watching their favorite prime time show or their neighbor who's running for selectman.

At this point, the WCTV board is working to formulate guidelines for candidates' use of the medium.

There are plenty of possibilities beyond the political, as well. Have an idea for a TV show? Want to be a star — even if it is just on the local screen? Then WCTV has a deal for you. Maybe you'd like to learn how to do video editing or camera operation. You can do that, too.

The era of community cable television promises to change the local political landscape as much as network television did the national political scene.

Stay tuned.

Lessons learned

by Arlene Surprenant

The Department of Education's report revealing the Wilmington School Department's lack of compliance with the state's hazing law should anger every citizen who cares about children.

The state spent almost two months investigating a complaint filed by Anne Linehan. The report is objective, listing both areas of compliance and non-compliance. It is also a damaging assessment of a town and coaching staff that turned its backs on prior acts of hazing, as well as an indictment of certain adults who did everything in their power to play down the August hazing incidents. These were the same incidents that the state labeled "reportable acts of child abuse" and our own chief of police called "indecent assault."

The most disturbing part of the report is a section called "Problem Areas." This section targets the lack of supervision at Camp Wakuta and the decision to put upperclassmen in charge of each cabin. It notes staff at the camp did learn about one incident during the week, but chose to do nothing to increase supervision. It points out some observers were in "danger" and so did not report what happened to the authorities. It notes that, in Wilmington, the athletic director reports directly to the superintendent and not the high school principal, which left Principal Paul Fleming with no authority to respond to two acts of intimidation that occurred once the hazing became public. The report points to "imperfections" in the appeals process used by former Supt. Bill Fay and urges that Fleming, in the future, be more directly involved.

The investigation revealed that neither the athletes nor the coaches clearly understood the hazing laws. More telling, the coaching staff did not consider the acts that occurred at camp to be hazing.

The school committee comes in for its share of criticism for not discussing its role as policy makers nor trying to discover why the district had not complied with the law. Much of the blame for that must be laid at the feet of Chairman Bob Peterson who, rightly or wrongly, imposed a gag order on the committee and refused to allow discussion of the issue during meetings.

Fay did offer counseling to all athletes through a letter to the parents, but that offer, says the report, was "inadequate." Fay's letter included a tear off sheet to be returned to the athletic department should any student wish to go through counseling in the special needs department. How much more appropriate — and less intimidating — it would have been to offer counseling through an outside agency without the presence of the coaching staff.

In summation, the state's report outlines a scenario that clearly encouraged the hazing. We now know that hazing occurred many times in the past. Yet few students or parents at that time came forward. And those that tried to were ridiculed or worse. This time only one resident, Anne Linehan, had the guts to say "no more." When no one paid attention to her charges, she took them right to the department of education and made them listen.

School committeeman Linda McMenimen went out on a limb in August when she grilled Coach Ed Harrison and others to assure there would be no hazing at camp. It's no wonder she was angered when she first learned hazing did occur. Shirley Callan was criticized publicly for calling the incidents acts of child abuse. Yet the department of education used the exact same words in its report.

There is something wrong with a town that makes scapegoats of two school board members for speaking their minds — but refuses to administer more than a slap on the wrist to perpetrators and coaches alike. A crime has been committed, but the impact has yet to sink in. There were some serious errors in judgement, but those who made them were not truly held responsible for their actions. Youngsters were hurt, but the victims as well as the perpetrators have yet to be helped. In a sense, this community, for the past few months, was more concerned with sweeping the whole mess under the rug than facing it squarely and righting the wrongs.

As the dust settles on Tuesday's recall election we all look forward to putting the hazing behind us. But that can only be done if the school committee follows the recommendations in the report, politics are kept out of the school system, and good people refuse to be silent ever again. Hopefully, the lessons learned this time around will never be forgotten.

A cold day in politics

Bob Surran didn't count on cold weather when he decided to run for school committee in the recall election. How cold was it? It was so cold that he groundhog's shadow froze to the ground.

The February 2, 1983 edition of the Town Crier of Tewksbury noted that:

The on going sewer project would, weather permitting, cause the closing of East Street from the intersection of Livingston Street to the Intersection of Maple Street from Saturday, Feb. 5 to Monday, Feb. 7.

Haffner's was offering number two fuel oil at 99 cents a gallon.

The Indian Ridge Condominiums planned an open house for sometime "soon."

Meadow Brook appeared with a caption declaring the Army Corps of Engineers considered the dam as having "high damage potential." The dam was owned by Metropolitan Life, developer of Tech Park on North Street. The company told town officials the problem would be taken care of.

Scouts Scott Lamon, Joe Seely, Tony and Andy DeFronzo and Mike Laliberte were pictured attempting to cross ice covered Ames Pond in a boat. They gave up and walked across.

Computer modem brings world to the classroom

by Arlene Surprenant
School has taken on an international flavor in Jane Shepherd's French and Spanish classes ever since a special phone modem was installed in her classroom at the North Intermediate School. The modem, says Principal Mike Tikonoff, allows Shepherd to have access to the entire world.

"It's really exciting. I've outfitted her with the necessary technologies. Her classroom is now the prototype classroom of the future," explains the principal.

Besides the modem, the telecommunications system includes an Apple IIs computer, an Apple IIe computer for word processing and maintaining databases, a printer, and a 19-inch color TV.

Shepherd is no stranger to the innovative system. Though she's been a foreign language teacher since 1975, she took a few years off to work at Raytheon and obtain a Masters Degree in computers from Revere College in Nashua. Shepherd worked with Compuserve, a system used by professionals, and is a charter member of America on Line, a computer network which allows schools and people all over the United States to talk to one another electronically. In fact, Shepherd used her personal account with America on Line to hook up the North with approximately 15 other schools until CNN came up with some financial support for the bulk of the on-line charges. In addition to America on Line, the school can access Le Minitel, a computer network in France provided by the French government.

To use the system, America on Line software is loaded into the computer and students use a code name to sign on. The local call goes through to Lowell and is forwarded to America on Line in Virginia. The password allows the students to enter a large office space with a bulletin board for messages and mailboxes along one wall.

"It's all done electronically," explains Shepherd. She points out that students "hang out" in the Electronic Schoolhouse, a gathering place for the different schools. From there, she adds, "the possibilities are endless; a little bit of imagination and hey..."

For example, Shepherd's students are charter members of Scrapbook, a creative writing project where other schools can read works by her students on the computer and make comments on them. Math teachers can put word problems on the bulletin board for students in other states to solve. Shepherd's Spanish students live chat with Hispanic adults in their native language while her French class is connected to one in Salt Lake City and one in France. Lesson plans drawn up by NASA are also on line; one day the school's science teachers will hook up to them and use them in class, predicts Shepherd.

In the electronic Conferencing Area, students from up to 46 schools can meet via the computer and ask questions about different parts of the country. Shepherd's eighth graders, for instance, have already learned alot about President Clinton's Inaugural and life in Washington D.C. Shepherd says the information will help prepare the students for their eighth grade field trip to Washington in the spring.

One day the students were surprised when a nuclear scientist from Texas came into the chat room and spoke to them electronically.

"It was almost like having a guest speaker on nuclear energy. Unfortunately, our eighth graders hadn't reached that chapter in their textbooks yet," said Shepherd.

Perhaps the most popular activity for the students in all the grades is the chance to correspond with pen pals across the country. Close to 200 sixth, seventh, and eighth graders at the North actively participate in electronic pen pals. The students correspond in one of three languages. Shepherd has trained seven or eight students to use the computers to help keep track of the correspondence. These students meet with Shepherd on Tuesdays and Thursdays during the school's activity time.

Computer group

Students wishing to correspond with a pen pal may pick up a standardized form from Shepherd's room and fill out the required information, including the message to be sent. The trained students enter the messages on the computer and remove the answers, which come through on the printer. Shepherd then folds each letter in half and tapes it to the Telecommunications Post Office located on her back wall. Each day students float into her room, says

Shepherd, to check if they have any mail. Shepherd has a database for pen pal matches and one for the addresses of contact schools. Each database is updated on a weekly basis by the students in the Telecommunications Club.

Shepherd explains the students are actually learning while having fun.

"This idea of using electronic mail--isn't that what big businesses are doing today? You send it electronically from one terminal to another? What's exciting is they're learning this in middle school," said Shepherd.

Tikonoff concurs. "It makes learning very real for the kids," he says.

When asked how she feels as their teacher, Shepherd is quick to reply, "That I'm doing my job." She goes on to add that she is providing some enjoyment and incentive, especially for at risk youngsters, to come to school each day.

Right now, the North Intermediate is the only school in the district with a modem. Part of the reason for that is money, part is that Shepherd is the only teacher familiar with the system. However, both Tikonoff and Shepherd hope the situation will change once the money crunch eases up and all schools can afford (or will receive grants) for the $400 set-up cost and the $24 monthly fee for 10 hours of on-line time. Shepherd is planning to conduct workshops in the system for other teachers during in-service days next year.

Sums up Shepherd, "This is very rewarding. I only hope it will be in our future in years to come."

Telecommunications Club: I will be most happy to send information to you about nuclear power. I will also enjoy answering any questions you have later in the year when you are studying about it.

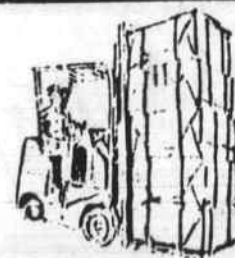

A bit about myself. I am 30 years old and I live in Bay City, Texas. I work in the plant engineering department of the South Texas Project, a nuclear electric generating station. Our station has two Westinghouse designed nuclear reactors, each of which produces 1,250 megawatts of electricity. It is one of the newest and largest nuclear power plants in the country, and our record for safety and operations are quite good.

I am sure you will have questions later and please feel free to send them via E(electronic) mail. I will try to answer all questions promptly. I may not know all the answers but my co-workers in the Best wishes to you all and I hope

Art class

The art class is coming along very well under the instruction of a very talented artist, George Webster. George has volunteered to teach our class. We are very grateful for his services, as are the 13 students in his class. As George tells many of the novice students eager to learn, the art of drawing and painting is easy. "Anyone who can learn to write can learn to draw." He goes on to say all artists will develop their own skills by observing and concentrating on a thought or subject. With patience, interest and sense of humor it will become a pleasant hobby. He also tells his class: "It is difficult to work alone and maintain a consistent work effort. Working in a class can be fun and social while learning."

If you would like to learn a relaxing and rewarding hobby, George will find a space for you in his art class. The day and time for the class is Monday, 1 to 3 p.m.

Income tax help

We are in the process of making appointments for income tax help. If you want your taxes prepared at the Center by Joe Hughes and his assistant, it would be wise to call the Senior Center, 657-7595 or 658-2258 as soon as you can. We received many calls last week for February appointments. Due to appointments in Reading, Joe will be at the Center Monday, Feb. 1 and 8 only, then on alternate Wednesdays. His assistant Mollie Ziegler, a highly recommended preparer will replace him on the other Wednesdays until the end of March.

She is also working in Reading. Remember the months go by very fast. Before we know it April is here and our tax forms have to be mailed. Don't struggle with them yourself. Joe and Mollie are very well-trained to prepare taxes, and they do it free of charge.

Before you go for your tax appointment, collect all necessary information to complete your federal and state tax forms. That is, your 1992 forms you received in the mail, your 1991 last year forms, W-2 forms for Social Security and pensions, 1099 interest forms, and all medical bills paid by you and proof of any other deductions you may want to claim.

Surplus commodities

A supply of surplus commodities will be distributed on February 25. As in other deliveries the amount of all items varies in number. Any low-income senior can qualify for these commodities. Many younger people have lost their jobs or have been cut back on their work hours. This order will contain food children should have. It would be a good thing if we all check our street. See if there is a family who can use these food items. Many of the young people do not know we will have them at the Center unless we tell them. If they do not want to come into the Center, have them call the center. Director Edie Cunningham will arrange for delivery.

Dr. Casey, podiatrist

Dr. Casey will be at the Center Wednesday, Feb. 10 at 10 a.m. He will be treating ailments of the feet on appointment only. Call the Center by Tuesday, Feb. 9. We have to call the doctor so he can schedule his time accordingly.

Whist Feb. 8

The first whist of February will be held in the function room of the Senior Center, 15 School St., February 8, starting at 1 p.m. When you enter the Center don't forget to take a 25 cent chance on $5. This is the money used on prizes for the game winners.

Social has openings

There are a few openings for the February therapeutic social Thursday, Feb. 18. If you want to attend, but cannot go to the Center, Call the director at 658-2258.

Above & Beyond

Bob Gage: Baseball aficionado

by Arlene Surprenant

A love of baseball drove Wilmington resident Bob Gage to volunteer numerous hours with the Wilmington Little League. After 15 years, Bob is still involved as a manager, coach, vice-president of the league, and a member of the board of directors.

"I do it for the enjoyment. I enjoy baseball; it's a good relief from work," says Bob with a laugh.

Bob first got involved when his son John played on a team. While other volunteer fathers moved up with their sons, Bob stayed with the 11 and 12 year age group and took over management of the White Sox in 1983. Being a manager, he adds, is the best part of working in the league.

One of his first acts when he was named to the board of directors was helping reconstruct Rotary Park. He modestly refers to his efforts as "just pushing a shovel around." When he was elected vice-president, Bob learned he was responsible for a lot that goes on behind the scenes, like buying uniforms, registering 600 to 700 youngsters, and conducting tryouts. Due to the recent turnout of 13 year olds, a new league was created just for that age group this year.

The league's busiest months are September and October, says Bob, then everything quiets down until mid-winter. Bob admits right now he's got some cabin fever.

"As soon as the snow melts, we're ready to go," he says. During the season, Bob can be found on a baseball field — his second home — several nights a week.

At one time, Bob and his wife Marilyn were active supporters of the high school band involved in fundraising and attending all concerts. For the past years Bob, a

Bob Gage

Wilmington High alumnus, has also been on the Hall of Fame Nomination Committee. As a committee member, Bob recommends deserving athletes and coaches for the hall of fame and spends time lobbying for his choices.

When he's not working on behalf of the town or playing baseball, Bob is director of manufacturing with a computer-aid-design company in Medford. He lives on Ella Avenue with his wife Marilyn and daughter Angela, who presently attends Assumption College. Their son John, who was a student in broadcast journalism at Syracuse University, lost his life in an auto accident three years ago.

When asked about his hobbies, Bob confirms what we already suspected.

"Baseball is my recreation, my hobby. For a lot of people the season may start in April and end in June. But for the rest of us, we go in tournament games and start registering kids in September. The kids are really good. And I get to meet many people in town," sums up this hard-working volunteer.

Lesko leads tough week

Tewksbury High School's hockey team turned red-hot last week with impressive wins over Lowell (11-2) and Wilmington (4-0).

The Wilmington victory was highlighted however by the performance by Wildcats' goalie Bob Lesko who came up with 40 saves.

Earlier in the week the Wilmington senior made 46 saves in a tough 5-5 tie with Haverhill.

The Redmen were paced last week by the play of senior wing Mike Delaney who scored five goals and had four assists in the two victories. Mike had three goals and three helpers in the Lowell rout.

Don Bibb and Brian Gangemi helped spark the Tewksbury attack against the Wildcats.

Murphy ready for skating cultural exchange

Jill Murphy, 16, of Wilmington will be leaving in February for a nine day trip to Milan, Italy and St. Moritz Switzerland as part of Team USA Cultural Exchange.

Jill, along with 13 other local figure skaters, will be coached by Olympic and World Champion Coach Carlo Fassi in Italy.

The skaters will be performing in exhibitions with Italian and Swiss figure skaters who will be coached by the American staff.

They will have a chance to visit scenic areas in both Italy and Switzerland as well as spend a day skiing in the Swiss Alps.

Jill, a junior at Wilmington High School, is a member of the Wilmington Figure Skating Club where she is a volunteer instructor for young skaters. She recently won a silver medal at a competition held at Dartmouth College in New Hampshire.

Wilmington Youth Hockey

Mite A's battle Masco

Wilmington's Mite A's played second place Masco two weekends in a row in recent Youth Hockey League action with mixed results.

Wilmington's defensive play was the difference in the first game.

In the first period, Wilmington's forwards put eight shots on net and were on top of Masco right from the start, checking the opponents before they could move the puck.

Masco's only shot in the period was a three on one opportunity which goaltender Jim McGonagle was able to stop.

Corcoran, Campbell, Clayton, Martinello and Buck were excellent on defense the entire game.

The second period was much like the first, with the locals outshooting their opponents, 7-2 and shutting down their attack with some good checking by Velardo, Binkoski, Montalto, Tomasi and Brady.

Montalto, Cushing and Loring killed two power plays in the period, keeping Masco off the scoreboard.

The Wildcats struck first to break the scoreless tie in the third period.

Tomasi put the backhand in off of a Duggan rebound four minutes into the final period. Wilmington continued to play well in it's own end.

Duggan, Brady and Robarge were able to kill a Masco power play with three minutes left in the game.

Cushing put Wilmington's 13th shot of the period in with only 25 seconds to play and put the game out of Masco's reach at 2-0.

The Wildcats put 28 shots on net while allowing only six to reach McGonagle.

In the second game, Wilmington's defense played well in limiting Masco to just 10 shots in the game.

Justin Brady also played well in net and was able to stop eight out of 10 shots, including several key saves.

The Wildcat forwards were never able to get an attack going due to the forechecking of Masco. The shots on net per period by Wilmington were four, two and zero for the same period of only six.

The Wildcats remain in first place with a record of 6-1-1, holding a three point lead over Masco despite the 2-0 loss in the second game between the two teams this season.

Wilmington Youth Hockey

Squirt C's on their toes

Wilmington's Squirt C's were on their toes for this early morning game, but it was all Haverhill in the first period.

With 3:03 left, Haverhill slipped one through the pads of Wilmington's goaltender. This was the first time since last year that Wilmington was behind after one period of play.

Brian LeBlanc opened the second period with a goal on a rebound from a shot by Dan Tello.

The best of the period was pretty even, with Wilmington and Haverhill skating stride for stride and neither goalie would give up, stopping all shots. The period closed at a 1-1 tie.

Just 30 seconds into the third period and Wilmington's Dan Tello took a pass at center from Erik Gustafson and put it into the net for what turned out to be the winning goal, but were they finished? No!

With 1:17 left in the period, Brian Considine, deep in his own zone sent a pass out to C.J. Holmes who scrambled down the ice and placed the shot in the upper corner for the goal.

That seemed to take the steam out of Haverhill. The clock showed :09 seconds left in the game when Dan Tello broke up the play, stole the puck and skated it in for the final goal.

Can Wilmington Squirt C's make it ten in a row? They face off against Andover III Sunday, Feb. 7 at 9:15 a.m.

Lifeguard training

The Greater Lowell Family YMCA will be conducting an American Red Cross Lifeguard Training Review Challenge Course. This course will be held March 14 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Cost will be $10.

The certification given in this course will be valid for three years. If your current lifeguard training certificate is due to expire in the near future, now is the perfect time to renew it, instead of waiting until the last minute.

Where do the fish go in winter ?

by Bill Conlon

Where do the fish go in winter? Somewhere, in the gloomy nether world under the ice, there are fish. I'm certain of it. People catch them from time to time -- big ones, too!

But where are they now, and why do I always seem to pick the wrong spot? Or am I just jinxed?

I've drawn up the theory that fish move under the ice, both daily and on a longer basis. A summertime hotspot may, or may not, hold fish in winter, on any given day.

There may be plenty of fish under a certain spot on the ice one day, and then nothing for days to come.

Where do they go and when? And why do I always pick the spots they just vacated?

Two Sundays ago, I got skunked on Lake Mascuppic, in the first of two ice derbies by the Merrimack Valley Bassmasters. Three flags all day, with nothing to show for any of them, and I was fishing in one of my hottest summertime bass spots. I felt sorry for the bait I drowned that day.

But Eddie Silva from Wilmington said they were hopping all day on the opposite shoreline. Nothing big, but lots of action. Sounded good.

So, this past Sunday at the Greater Lowell Fly Fishers event, I fished that shoreline instead. Why not? I had oodles of bait left over from the previous week, and I wanted at least an amusing day of fishing.

(Not that taking $300 for a first-place fish would hurt, mind you...) Instead, I got skunked again. Two early flags, then nada. Zip. The guy next to me landed a winner, but it was the only fish he took.

I had won a tournament a couple of years ago fishing the very same spot I was in that morning, but not that day. Why? What had changed?

Halfway through the day I picked up and moved to another "hotspot" for summertime bass, but no dice. A little pickerel was my sole glory after six hours on the ice.

Why? Where do they go? Why is one spot hot one day then cold the next? Any time you hook a bass, it screams line off the reel, so you can be certain they move. But why and where do they migrate from day to day, and even hour to hour? It isn't uncommon to have a hot morning and a dull afternoon.

Of course, I knew even before the sun came up that my day would be a disaster. Somehow I managed to break my trusty old Thermos in the pre-dawn darkness, and hot coffee would have helped ease the tedium of a cold, boring, snowy day.

Luckily, Bob and John Mercier of Wilmington came to fish nearby, with their camp stove and supplies on their "ice furniture." They were kind enough to provide this scribe with hot coffee, even though they made the mistake setting up next to me. Remember, I'm hexed. Hope you guys had improved luck at the Superbowl poker game that night!

Oh well, maybe this weekend. My spies indicate they're hauling in big ones from a spot I've never fished on Mascuppic, so maybe I'll try that untested location this Sunday. Or a cursing of Ames Pond, perhaps ...

Then again, no matter what spot I fish, I feel sorry for the poor guys that get jinxed-by-association when I show up.

--- Tackle Box ---

Here comes the train-wreck of a weekend schedule:

There is a raft of interesting outdoors issues this weekend, and I'd love to cover them all. Two words: Im - Possible.

The Eastern Fishing & Outdoors Expo visits the Worcester Centrum this weekend. This show has it all, from a "hawg tank" with live game fish to demos and instruction.

Also this weekend is the monster Meredith (N.H.) Rotary Club's ice fishing extravaganza. A $15 entry fee gets you in, and the door prizes alone makes the sign-up worth it. Saturday and Sunday, with sign-ups at the trailer on Meredith Bay.

As noted above, Sunday will be the Merrimack Valley Bassmaster's second derby on Lake Mascuppic, at the Dracut boat ramp. $10 entry.

Also on Sunday is the Shawshen Watershed Environmental Action Team's (S.W.E.A.T.) ice fishing derby, in conjunction with MetLife Outdoors, at Ames Pond in Tewksbury. At least this year there will probably be good ice all day, unlike previous incarnations of this event.

On Valentine's Day, February 14, look for the second Greater Lowell Fly Fisher's ice fishing derby, this time on Crystal (Freeman) Lake in North Chelmsford. Also that day is the first 3-D archery shoot at the Tewksbury Rod & Gun Club, and the Boston Sportsman's Show at the Bayside Expo Center, Feb. 12 - 14.

Ooops! Almost forgot the derby results from this past Sunday at the GLFF event on Mascuppic:

First prize and $300 was awarded to Keith Franklin of Stowe, Mass., for a largemouth at 4-pounds, 10-ounces. Second went to Dracut's George Thomas for a 3-pound-13 bass; third place and $100 went to Bruce Woodman of Westford for a 3-10 bass that was just a bit longer than the fourth place fish caught by Roger Berthold Jr. of Tyngsboro. Fifth through tenth places were won by Steve Lavoie from Tyngsboro; John Connors from Lowell; Ray Rondeau from Lowell; Dave Franklin from Greenfield, Mass; Mike Yarnell of Tyngsboro; and Jim Torrice of Billerica held up last place with a pickerel which pulled 3-pounds-1. A special $100 prize for the GLFF member taking the biggest fish was handed to John Duarte of Tyngsboro, who took a 2-pound-3 bass that was knocked off the board early, but he was the member with the biggest fish, so...

In all, 165 anglers braved the wet and cold weather for the GLFF ice fishing derby.

With a wink to Jeff MacNelly's new comic strip, I've decided I am most assuredly a Plugger.

Martineau earns varsity spot

John Martineau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donal Martineau of Tewksbury, is a member of the varsity wrestling team at Lawrence Academy, a private co-educational college preparatory high school in Groton. John is a senior at Lawrence.

Quality athletics are a long standing tradition at Lawrence, which is celebrating its bicentennial this year. Also generating excitement on campus this year is the construction of a new 40,000 square foot athletic facility as part of the three year, $8 million campaign for Lawrence Academy.

Lawrence Academy competes in the highly competitive independent School League which is made up of major independent schools throughout the Greater Boston area.

The Academy sees athletics as an integral part of an overall program that combines athletics and extra curricular activities with challenging academics to give the students the best possible preparation for college and the challenges they will face in life.

Tewksbury's Joe Martineau was a solid performer on this year's Lawrence Academy wrestling team.

CRUISING THE PANAMA CANAL

One of the most interesting experiences you will ever have on board a cruise ship is a trip through the Panama Canal. The day's passage will give you an unsurpassed view of one of the engineering wonders of the world. At 50 miles long, the Panama Canal cuts a slice through the jungles of the Isthmus of Panama, connecting North and South America. After your ship waits in line to enter the canal, a pilot will board to guide you through the six sets of locks and narrow channels. Huge so-called "mules," or 55 ton tugs, will use cables to tow your ship on its journey. Mid-point, in the eight to nine hour passage, you will encounter Gatun Lake, the second largest constructed lake in the world. (Only Lake Mead, formed by the construction of the Hoover Dam, is bigger.) Sound intriguing? Welcome to ALL AROUND TRAVEL, where you'll find travel brochures to dream through, filled with many of the interesting things our world has to offer. If you only know that you want to go, but are unsure of where, listen to what our experienced travel professionals have to say. We're easy to find at 203 Jefferson Rd., North Wilmington (Rt. 62), where we're open Mon-Fri 9-5 and by appointment. PH: 658-2313. We offer complete computerized travel services for leisure and business travel.

HINT: Make sure in advance that your cruise includes a daytime passage through the Panama Canal.

Direct Tire campaign aids Jimmy Fund

For the second consecutive year, Direct Tire Sales utilized it's radio advertising campaign to raise funds for the Jimmy Fund/Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

The 1992 effort reaped even better results than that of 1991 - an additional $6,000. This week, Barry Steinberg, President of Direct Tire Sales, presented a check for $21,058 to Jimmy Fund Executive Director Mike Andrews. Wilmington youngster Nicholas Eaton was on hand to help accept the check.

Radio stations WBOS, WCRB, WFNX, WRKO, and WZLX all participated in the radio campaign, contributing extra air time to the worthy cause.

"Once again, it's gratifying to be able to give something back to the community -- especially in these tough times," says Barry Steinberg. "It gives me great pleasure to know that Direct Tire Sales can give a little help and hope to these kids and their families."

The Jimmy Fund is the primary fundraising arm of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. It is the official charity of the Boston Red Sox, the Variety Club of New England, and the Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Association. Founded in 1948, The Jimmy Fund is one of America's favorite charities.

Correction

A correction should be made to the list of Dewing "Students of the Month" for January, which ran on page 9 of the Jan. 28 issue.

For Room A6, in Grade 2, James Hamilton should have been named as student of the month, instead of Carole Sullivan.

The correction was offered by the Dewing School administration.

Winter recital this weekend

Music teachers and their students in the Greater Merrimack Valley area are preparing for a busy winter and spring schedule of performances and evaluations. Each year, students are invited to take part in a winter recital; this year's will be held Sunday, Feb. 7 at the Andover Public Library at 2:15 p.m. The public is invited.

An exciting annual event is the Music Festival, which began in 1985 and has developed into a major musical event at the University of Massachusetts, Lowell. At the Festival, students perform and are evaluated by visiting adjudicators; they also create a musical poster display, and have access to computers with musical programs, and join in the exciting ensemble performance. Over 100 entrants now participate in this event, which will be held this year on April 4 at 1 p.m.

Some student members of the MVMTA have continued their musical studies in higher education. Sara Brandt of Billerica is now in her second year at Interlochen Music School in Michigan; she studies performance in flute and piano. Jennifer Drumm, also of Billerica, studies music therapy at Emmanuel College in Boston. Jennifer Ventulo of Tewksbury is studying music production at the University of Mass., Lowell. These students began their early music training in the studio of Barbara Sands of Tewksbury.

Membership in the MVMTA is open to all persons professionally engaged in any field of musical activity. For more information, Call Margo Higgins at 934-0103, or Kate Benson at 470-0728.

Showplace Cleaning, 1215 Main St., Tewksbury (508) 851-3314

Edward Graves and Philip Doherty are on call 24 hours a day, in case of emergencies - - cleaning emergencies that is.

They own Showplace Cleaning, which offers a wide range of services to cover every aspect of building maintenance such as janitorial services, office cleaning and carpet cleaning. Their specialty crew also offers expert marble care, emergency care (which mainly involves repairing fire and flood damage), and floor and window cleaning.

Since Ed established his own business in 1983, after working for a small cleaning equipment repair company, he has witnessed a tremendous amount of growth. He and Phil, who have been friends for 20 years, have expanded the company which started out cleaning carpets and 10 small office buildings, to cleaning 50 executive offices. One of their largest accounts is the MBTA. They stress, however, that this growth hasn't confined them to their larger accounts. They maintain their original prospect of specializing in residential carpet cleaning, on a slightly larger scale. They currently employ about 80 experienced individuals.

Ed feels his business' success is largely due to the quality of work Showplace Cleaning accomplishes.

"We never get a call back to redo a job," he said. "We do it right the first time and guarantee 100 percent customer satisfaction."

Their full-time supervisors with experienced background in janitorial cleaning business are assigned to each job site to thoroughly inspect all work performed.

Showplace Cleaning is also a member of the Business Services Contractors Association (BSCA), an organization which holds annual conventions to display the newest cleaning technology. This gives them the leading edge in training techniques, which they use for all new and existing employees.

Their motto is "The only thing cleaner than our work is our reputation," and Ed and Phil are willing to back that statement by providing a list of customer references.

Showplace Cleaning is located in Claddagh Place, 1215 Main St., Tewksbury. They can be reached 24 hours a day at (508)851-3314.

Mancini's Family Restaurant, 212 Main St., Wilmington 657-4600

Jim Meehan and Dan Turcotte in their dining room

Starting as a small fast food type restaurant in the late 60's, Mancini's has grown tremendously, and has now built a new restaurant which seats over 100 people. But as much as things change some things never do.

Mancini's is still famous for their chicken and jo-jo potatoes. Dan Turcotte and Jim Meehan are still there and their friendly home style atmosphere still fills the air.

But in growing Mancini's has done more than just add more seats. They have a full menu with most anything you could want. There is now liquor service available, with full bar, wine and beer. For lunch Mancini's usually offer 4 or 5 specials starting at about $3.99. Dinner specials start at $5.99 and usually number 3 or 4. Specials may be a regular menu item or if Dan or Jim get creative a new item may appear.

Some customers may notice famous faces as they dine. Not portraits on the wall, but live Boston Bruins stars are known to frequent Mancini's. If you are planning to watch a Bruin's practice session at the arena it's a good idea to stop by for some take out at Mancini's first. Just call 657-4600. In ten minutes or so your order will be ready. The full menu is available for take out.

Since 1989, more than 1500 couples have become parents through the Center's state-of-the-art techniques and counseling methods.

Fertility center holds baby reunion

Hundreds of babies and their families recently attended a belated Baby Christmas Party sponsored by New England Memorial Fertility Center of Stoneham.

During the party, rescheduled due to the recent blizzard, these youngsters - whose births are the result of the Fertility Center's state-of-the-art techniques and counseling methods helped the center celebrate its fourth anniversary. And since it was a Christmas party, Santa Clause delivered gifts to the children.

The New England Memorial Fertility Center which is affiliated with New England Memorial Hospital, opened in 1989 to help couples with difficulties achieving pregnancy. That year, the center celebrated its first Christmas party with 17 babies.

Today, the Fertility center has one of the highest clinical pregnancy rates in New England. According to Dr. Vito R.S. Cardone, Medical Director, this success can be attributed to the dedication of the center's 42 person staff and the individualized treatment each patient receives.

Dr. Cardone, who is also a member of the medical staff at New England Memorial, was the founder and director of the Montreal Fertility Institute in Canada and the AtlantaCare Fertility Center in Lynn.

Over 1500 couples have been treated at the New England Memorial Fertility Center. The Center practices a variety of fertility techniques, including In Vitro Fertilization, micro-surgery, artificial insemination Gamete Intrafallopian Transfer, etc. Counseling is offered for couples who want to explore those options, as well as adoption for those who are unable to conceive.

Carlson Real Estate President Richard Carlson (right) welcomes real estate speaker Bill Barrett to the recent Carlson 25th anniversary kick-off at the Colonial Hilton in Wakefield.

Carlson Real Estate celebrates 25th year

Carlson Real Estate, celebrating its 25th year in the real estate business, kicked off the new year on January 6 with a company-wide program featuring international real estate speaker Bill Barrett at the Colonial Hilton in Wakefield.

Over 275 sales associates and managers attended the program on personal marketing and promotion to increase business and referrals. There was also a special afternoon session for managers on managing sales associates for higher productivity. The program was the first in a series of events celebrating Carlson's 25th anniversary.

In his seminar, Barrett, who has been nominated by the National Association of Realtors as Outstanding Educator of the Year, shared some of the top prospecting ideas of today's superstars in the real estate industry, plus techniques to lead an exciting and successful life.

Started in 1968 with one office in Marblehead, Carlson Real Estate has grown to 21 offices and over 475 sales associates. As a full service company, Carlson Real Estate offers assistance with residential and commercial sales, relocation and referral services, real estate education, and mortgage and appraisal services.

RE/MAX Hearthstone receives awards

RE/MAX Hearthstone Realty, 1215 Main Street have announced that in 1992 it was involved in 241 transactions, representing nearly $30,000,000 in transaction volume. Approximately one-third of that volume was in the fourth quarter.

At the Annual RE/MAX of New England Awards Dinner at the Westin Hotel in Boston last week, nine RE/MAX's Hearthstone Sales Associates received awards. Receiving RE/MAX's highest award, the 100 percent Club Award, were Joan Unger, Cathy Lawson, Kathi Donato and Linda Covino. Linda also won the award for the Top Producer in the office for the second straight year.

"We are very pleased with our sales levels for 1992!" says owner Bill Perkins. "It is a real inspiration to work with all top salespeople." Perkins added that so far in 1993, business is even better. "While it is difficult to find enough experienced agents to handle all of the business, even with the 12 we have we should be able to top $50 million in sales this year."

Um, Um, Good!

CHOCOLATE LOVERS' DELIGHT

By KEN MAGUIRE

While life-threatening diseases such as AIDS or Cancer are at the forefront of people's minds when it comes to national health issues, another series of diseases quietly affects millions.

Muscular Dystrophy (MD) is the term used collectively to identify 48 different neuromuscular diseases that chooses its victims at random. No one is immune and there is no method of prevention for the diseases, some of which are sometimes fatal.

The chubby, healthy glow of a newborn baby is no match for Duchenne's disease, which babies are born with everyday. And even grandpa, who walks the beach every morning for some fresh air, can't prevent the onset of Lou Gehrig's disease. Both diseases fall under the wings of MD.

Generally described as "weakness of the muscles," MD doesn't discriminate from the newborn baby to the elderly folk and everyone in between. And like other major diseases, there is no known cure. Some major breakthroughs have been made, but for the most part, there is a long way to go.

Until there is a cure, victims and their families must cope with what life has dealt them. What these families often face are people who simply don't know what MD is, or don't know how to respond to people afflicted with the disease.

One way to learn about MD, and tempt your taste buds at the same time, is to attend the Muscular Dystrophy Association's (MDA) Third Annual "Chocolate Lovers' Delight" to be held this Sunday afternoon at the Radisson Hotel in Woburn.

In addition to learning about MD, another goal of the event is to raise money for the ongoing work done to combat MD and support programs that help its victims. All of the proceeds from the event will go to the MDA.

Last year, 650 people took part in the festivities. There was a line outside the door an hour before opening and 300 people were eventually turned away. For Sunday, the hotel's entire ballroom will be open to accommodate the expected barrage of chocolate lovers and MD advocates.

Fifteen gourmet chocolate shops from around the state, and one from New York, will cook up their best recipes and serve them Sunday to anyone willing to pay the $12 admission fee.

A sample of what awaits: white marble cake topped with chocolate frosting, cookies and creme, bavarian chocolate, chocolate coconut, fudge brownies, chocolate truffles, and the perennial favorite, tuxedo strawberries, plus many more.

Chocolate, however, will not be the only attraction. Vermont getaways and a basketball autographed by the Boston Celtics will be auctioned off, ski passes can be won, a treasure chest will be full of knick knacks to pick from, a five-foot tall stuffed Bugs Bunny will won by some lucky sole.

In addition, live entertainment will be provided by local artists. Phillip Lester, classical composer, and the Broadway Kids, a singing and dancing group based out of Stoneham, will join in the festivities.

Keeping control of the event will be a combination of the MDA executive committee members, a group of Saugus High School students, and about 40 volunteers, many of whom have no personal connection to MD.

"You get a lot of people who just want to help out," said Debbie Carns, an MDA Regional Coordinator. "It's great that there is a variety of people. It's just wonderful when people are willing to help."

Helping Muscular Dystrophy

While food, fun and games will rule the day, reality will have to set in at some point. Many people don't understand MD, which sometimes creates a feeling of emptiness for victims and their families.

Volunteering on Sunday will be Woburn resident Donna Bullen and her 5-year-old daughter, Stacey.

Deirdre Anderson, catering sales manager of the Radisson Hotel, Woburn and Stacy Bullen of Woburn representing the Muscular Dystrophy Association, which is having the third annual fundraiser, "A Chocolate Lovers' Delight" at the Radisson Feb. 7.

Stacey was born with spinal muscle atrophy, which fortunately is not life-threatening. Stacey has plenty of friends and does not consider herself different from anyone else.

Mother Donna said recently that she has fought hard to give Stacey the kinds of things that other kids have, and often don't appreciate.

"I never stop," Bullen said. "We never use the word 'can't'. (Stacey) goes horseback riding, she's gone rollerskating, she tries anything."

It's been a constant struggle for Donna and her husband Rodney. They have fought with the school department of Woburn and with City Hall. When Stacey was to begin kindergarten last year, the school's bathroom was to be handicap accessible, and a wheelchair ramp was to be in place.

A quick drive by the school the day before classes were to begin and Bullen discovered however that there had been no

Chocolate Lovers Delight

ramp put in and no renovations done to the bathroom. Letting school department officials know how she felt eventually got Stacey what was needed.

But Bullen says it shouldn't come down to a struggle to get what is only fair for her child.

She feels that people should open their minds and not be afraid.

A recent struggle with a gym teacher is a classic example of what she is talking about. It took Bullen three months to convince the gym teacher that Stacey has the ability to participate in gym class.

"People are not educated (on MD issues)," Bullen said. "I just think people are afraid. You have to make yourself known. Some educators are from back when these kids we're separated."

Bullen said she is alone when it comes to fighting for the rights of MD students. However, she understands if other parents of children with MD choose not to get involved.

"I'm pretty much doing it myself," Bullen said. "There's really nobody else to do it with you. You see, first you have to accept it, then the anger period sets in," referring to when parents first learn that their child has a form of MD. "You learn to deal with it, maybe some people haven't reached that yet."

The Americans with Disabilities Act, passed last year, will mandate handicap accessibility of all public places starting in two years. But the one thing Bullen will never do is let up or become satisfied. Her latest goal is to have a totally accessible playground, one where kids like Stacey can enjoy themselves by being able to use the equipment.

She has spoken to the Woburn selectmen and school committee about the possibility of converting school grounds into a playground, should one of the schools close in the scheduled redistricting. That prospect is a long way off because of funding questions, but Bullen says she will continue to fight.

Yet another goal of Bullen's is to have the city of Woburn provide a handicap accessible school bus. Presently, she drives Stacey to school every day.

Stacey's teacher this year has been great, according to Bullen, but in general, she says teachers and principals should be required to participate in classes to learn more about MD and how to communicate with those afflicted with the disease.

"It's okay to ask questions and parents are the best resource," Bullen said. This Sunday will be Bullen's first tour of volunteering duty at the "Chocolate Lovers' Delight." Bullen hopes to meet other volunteers at the event, while sharing in the good times and good treats.

All chocolate lovers should try to get tickets before the event and can do so by calling the MDA at (508) 777-0333. Or swing by the Teahouse Floreal in Wakefield.

MDA officials want everyone to enjoy the festivities, but also want people to take with them some knowledge of Muscular Dystrophy and what they can do to help, even if it's just to have a basic understanding.

About the Towns

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

"About The Towns" covers recent events in the 13-town Middlesex East area. Because Middlesex East deadlines are early, please check the front sections of this paper for up-to-date information about your city or town. We also welcome original material - please send it to Phyllis Nissen, "About The Towns," Middlesex East Supplement, Box 240, Reading, MA 01867.

BURLINGTON - Burlington has been approved by the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency as a local rehabilitation agency for participation in the Home Improvement Loan Program.

As a result of this approval, the town will be able to assist middle to low-income families applying for a low-interest home improvement loan with participating lenders. This five percent interest loan must go to a one - to - four - family unit in which the borrower currently resides and must be for one of the following purposes: enhancing basic living conditions by altering or repairing the home; making the dwelling fully accessible for disability-impaired household members; or bringing the home up to state and local building code standards.

For more information, contact William Lewis in the Veterans Services Office at (617) 270-1960.

MALDEN - Among the participants in a recent statewide training workshop which focused on interagency cooperation in the various aspects of domestic violence cases was Donna M. Padula of Medford, acting chief probation officer of the Malden District Court.

The Office of the Commissioner of Probation and the Judicial Institute co-sponsored this first statewide workshop which brought together probation officials from across the state as well as representatives from the Trial Court, Attorney General's Office, District Attorneys' Offices, and victim and batterer treatment centers.

Integrating the various legal and criminal justice processes requires collaboration among police, courts, prosecutors, victim advocates, hospitals, and other appropriate agencies.

"MUSCLE CARS" ON DISPLAY

On February 27, The Museum of Transportation will bring up the curtain on its new exhibit, Muscle Cars: Wild in the Streets, featuring the high-performance cars of the 1964 to 1974 era.

Amidst the sights and sounds of Beach Boys music, street racing videos and California surfing scenes, the Museum will exhibit a list of cars that personify "power under the hood."

Cars in the new exhibit will include a 1961 Chrysler 300G, 1965 Shelby GT350 Mustang, 1966 Plymouth Hemi Belvedere, 1967 Pontiac GTO, 1968 Camaro Z28, 1969 Dodge Daytona, 1969 Oldsmobile 442 convertible, 1969 AMX SS, 1970 Plymouth Superbird, 1970 King Cobra, 1970 Chevelle 396 SS and 1970 Ford Mustang Boss 429. The cars in this year's exhibit represent some of the most exceptional finds in New England, and all are in show condition.

These were the cars that fired the imaginations of a whole generation - the Baby Boomers - and they continue to symbolize youth, power and the thrill of the open road. Through the end of 1993 they'll share space at the Museum with an authentic, fully outfitted muscle car garage, a heart-pounding street racing scene, and a fabulous array of prints by some of the finest auto artists in the country.

The Museum is open Wednesday through Sunday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Museum is wheelchair accessible and ticket prices are $4 for adults, $2 for children and seniors, with special rates for school and community groups available.

School notes

by phyllis nissen

If you'd like to read about your favorite school, student or teacher in "School Notes," please send school newsletters and other relevant information to Phyllis Nissen, "School Notes," Middlesex East Supplement, Box 240, Reading, MA 01867.

For the past three years, in January and February, Melrose High students have brought free, light breakfasts and hearty greetings to senior citizens on Saturday mornings.

These actions are part of an intergenerational program that began at the high school as a way for students to get to know older community members.

The popular program takes place each Saturday between 8:00 and 9:00 a.m. when pairs of students deliver light breakfasts, warm wishes and conversation - if desired - to their designated elders.

For more information on "brown bag breakfasts," call (617) 665-4304.

Veteran home economics teacher Elaine Farmer is the new chairperson of Woburn High's Home Economics Department, replacing Barbara Gillespie who retired last year.

Farmer had been "acting department chairperson" since Gillespie's retirement but as chairperson is now giving up two classes - according to the Woburn teachers' contract, department chairs teach two fewer classes than other teachers.

An alumna of the Woburn Public Schools and a Woburn resident, Farmer began her teaching career in Woburn in 1973, and holds a B.S. in Home Economics from Framingham State and a Masters in Computers in Education from Lesley College. She has also taken a number of accounting courses.

A junior high - middle school teacher since '73, she graduated to the high school in September.

The Stoneham, Wakefield and Woburn Public Schools have been awarded a $21,000 grant to strengthen Special Education pre-referral services at the high school level. Diana Minton of Wakefield, Robert McArdle of Woburn and Special Education Director Frank Gagliardi of Stoneham wrote the grant.

According to the "Stoneham Independent," the grant provides for training in pre-referral, integration and mainstreaming activities for regular education teachers and administrators; the refining of policies and practices for pre-referral in each building; and the training of teachers, by department, in curriculum modification, co-teaching and collaboration models.

Running from January through August 31 of this year, the grant will enable the schools involved to hire consultants to conduct workshops, make on-site visits and work with individual teachers in their classrooms.

Some regular education pre-referral is already in place at the elementary and middle school levels.

According to the "Independent," of the 2,669 students in the Stoneham Public Schools, more than 450 receive some type of special education: the highest number - 276 - spends about an hour a week in a resource room; 36 spend more than 25 percent of their day in a resource room; and 63 meet in self-contained classes. Thirty-four preschoolers receive some type of special education.

According to Gagliardi, the number of special education referrals remains steady each year "despite the attempt to mainstream students by bringing special education to the classroom."

WINCHESTER - Stephen R. Lavery is the new president of Winchester Hospital, replacing Eugene Loubier who was re-elected president of Winchester Healthcare Management, Inc., the parent corporation of Winchester Hospital and its affiliates.

Lavery had been the hospital's executive vice president since 1989. Loubier, president since 1985, will remain a member of the Board of Directors of both the parent corporation and the hospital.

STONEHAM, MELROSE, WAKEFIELD, WOBURN - The Massachusetts Water Resource Authority has rejected a claim by Stoneham, Melrose, Wakefield, and Woburn for a rebate because of terrible water in the area this summer.

According to the "Stoneham Independent," the discolored water was caused by problems at the MWRA pumping station at Stoneham's Spot Pond which services many northern area communities but a rebate "is not the policy direction the Authority should embark on," in the words of MWRA Executive Director Douglas MacDonald.

The MWRA had already provided Stoneham with a $21,000 rebate in 1992 after too much water pressure in the lines caused several water mains within the town to break. Stoneham DPW officials estimate that the town had to use 30 million gallons of extra water - or the equivalent of $25,000 - to flush the lines during the summer to get rid of rusty water.

"Matinee"

by Rochelle Flynn

"Matinee" Starring John Goodman, Simon Fenton, Cathy Moriarty. Directed by Joe Dante. Screenplay by Charlie Haas. Produced by Michael Finnell. Rated PG.

There was a time when exploitation movies were fun. No excess violence, no uncalled for nudity. Just lots of anticipation for cheaply made flicks with campy, over-the-top titles and plots.

Director Joe Dante captured their silly fun with an homage to sticky Saturday afternoons spent in the dark. Though John Goodman plays Lawrence Woolsey, his character is based on William Castle, the P.T. Barnum of exploitation flicks who took his road shows from town to town with truckloads of gimmicks. Castle actually travelled with nurses to help the audience recover from his "shocking" movies. He even booby-trapped seats with buzzers for "The Tingler," so viewers were literally jumping in their chairs.

A swaggering cigar-chomping Goodman is blustery and kind-hearted as the showman. Travelling one step ahead of the bill collectors with his cynical B-actress girlfriend (Cathy Moriarty), Woolsey loves the game. We can't help but be infected by this middle-aged man who sees a stuffed alligator at a dusty gas station and immediately comes up with movie titles that have cheapo plots built right into them, like "Gal Gator."

Woolsey blows into Key West the same weekend the Bay of Pigs crisis has everyone in the area loading their bomb shelters with bottled water and boxes of cereal. Woolsey figures he can pack the local cinema with panicked patrons who will buy into "Mant!" the story of a mutant atomic man-ant told with Rumble-Rama and Atomovision. Woolsey befriends navy brat Gene (Simon Fenton) who knows and loves Woolsey's films. Woolsey and Gene are on the same wave-length. They love the make-believe terror of rubber suits and silly stories. But Dante and screenwriter Charlie Haas didn't stick with the budding friendship between what are basically two kids with a mutual affection. Gene's friends, an assortment of sweet cliches, entangle the plot with unnecessary earnestness.

The characters may be as much a part of the early 1960s as the silly movies they flocked to on the weekends, but they bog down the film with heavy-handed plot tangents. Gene, always on the move from base to base, sees a similar outcast soul in Sandra, a hippie rebel. Sherry is a princess swathed in pink who casts a randy eye at Stan. But Stan is scared away from Sherry by her ex-boyfriend, a leather-clad delinquent who spouts poetry as the movie's rebel without a clue.

These characters are all on the cutesy side and the story becomes too involved with their shenanigans. More interesting are the parallels between the Bay of Pigs scare and the nation's growing atomic fears which manifest in Woolsey's outrageously silly ant movie. Better still are the characters Woolsey drags along with him. Moriarty is fab as his cynical, heavily-peroxided girlfriend who plays a nurse in the theater's lobby, making patrons sign releasforms not to sue if the movie gives them heart failure. No one seems to notice she's also in "Mant!" as the brown-haired girlfriend of the bug-eyed atomic victim.

John Sayles and Dick Miller show up as fallen B-actors who travel with Woolsey, stirring up controversy around his harmless films. Jesse White, known for years as Maytag's lonely repairman, plays a distributor impressed with Woolsey's manipulative trickery.

Thanks to a strong cast, the campy good humor of "Mant!" and accurate period details, Dante captures the naivete of the Kennedy era just before Americans learned to become cynics. Happily, even the mushy plot couldn't get in the way of the enthusiasm and buoyant atmosphere of "Matinee."

Short Takes

Hexed is a silly little one-note comedy starring Arye Goss as a hotel clerk who lives up his mundane existence by pathologically lying. One of his whoppers came to haunt him when evil supermodel Hexina (Claudia Christian), whom Goss claims to know, enters his life. There are a few laughs, but the overall effect is sophomoric. Rated R. * 1/2

Alive is the true story of a soccer team's plane that crashed in the Andes in 1972 and those who lived to tell about it. Sensitive and technically appealing, the film relies too much on the action/adventure aspects of the young athletes' survival. It may capture the glories of nature in all its terrible beauty, but we are left longing for more of the psychological glue that kept these people together. Rated R. ***

Chaplin covers too much ground too fast, but Robert Downey, Jr. is convincing as the Little Tramp. Crammed with interesting tid-bits about Hollywood's early days and the sexual exploits of this comic genius, writer/director Richard Attenborough would have done better with a smaller story and more depth. Go just to see Downey, he's worth it. Rated PG-13. ***

Used People is a disarming tale of a tough Jewish family, lead by recently widowed matriarch Shirley MacLaine, that is coaxed into taking a chance on happiness by gregarious Marcello Mastroianni. This warm and funny flick may be a bit too sentimental, but you won't mind, as the acting is top notch and the dialogue sharp and witty. Rated PG-13. ***

Scent of a Woman gives Al Pacino a chance to knock our socks off as a blind army veteran who hires an unwilling prep school student (BC student Chris O'Donnell) to guide him around New York City for one wild weekend. The story unfolds in typical Hollywood fashion, but go to see Pacino's performance, you won't be disappointed. His fine acting and some clever language save it from being too precious. Rated R. ***

Peter's Friends is rather like the Anglophile version of "The Big Chill," but with more poignancy and a sharper wit. Directed by Kenneth Branagh, who stars as a British producer gone Hollywood, the movie can't avoid predictability, but is quite entertaining within that parameter. Six college friends gather for a reunion weekend 10 years after graduation and learn more about one another than they'd planned. Unrated.

A Few Good Men is a powerful drama set in a military courtroom starring Tom Cruise, Demi Moore and Jack Nicholson. In spite of rather uneven pacing, this movie is packed with strong performances and a dynamic ending. It also manages to sidestep numerous stereotypes as it builds layered and believable characters. Rated R.  1/2

The Bodyguard is a truly, truly bad movie. Kevin Costner stars as the upright bodyguard to singer Whitney Houston, who has obviously never acted before. The draggy plot borders on the ridiculous and since there's no chemistry between Houston and Costner, this doesn't even make for good romantic trash. Rated R. *

Aladdin may not be a Disney classic, but it is a lot of fun, Robin

Williams' witty performance as a big blue genie is a non-stop vaudevillian act, as he hurls jokes to the kiddies before flinging others at their parents. The music may not blow you away and the animation is less than lush, but the rat-a-tat humor and strong characters make this a success. Rated G.  1/2

1993 PONTIAC FIREBIRD FORMULA

The fourth generation of legendary Pontiac sports car excitement debuts in 1993 with the Pontiac Firebird -- a newly styled and engineered sports car that delivers eye-catching looks, high performance and roadability. The new Firebird can be seen at Crest Buick/Pontiac in Woburn.

"Firebird has always symbolized the epitome of Pontiac sports car driving excitement," said Pontiac General Manager John G. Middlebrook. "Just like the two million units before it, the fourth generation will carry on that tradition -- cars designed to put fun and excitement in the driving experience."

So newly designed and engineered are the three models -- Firebird, Formula and Trans Am -- that 90 percent of the content is new to the sports car, including two new engines, a fortified structure and dent, ding and rust resistant body panels.

The fortified structure along with enhanced safety and security features, streamlined service procedures and reduced replacement part costs, should result in the 1993 Firebird receiving reduced insurance rates. "We've improved

New Firebird leads way for Pontiac

Firebird's safety features, made it more theft resistant and less costly to repair," said Middlebrook "and that should help take a bite out of the insurance premiums owners have traditionally paid."

Production of the 1993 Firebird began in November at the General Motors Ste-Therese, Quebec assembly plant with the first saleable models scheduled for dealer showrooms in early 1993.

So fully contented is the top-of-the-line Trans Am that there are just five options -- automatic transmission, leather seats, compact disc player, removable hatch roof and sunshades.

"Pontiacs are bold, purposeful, athletic and personal," said Middlebrook. "No where are those images more apparent than in the new Firebird's aggressive exterior, drive-oriented interior, powerful powertrains and precise handling suspension systems."

The newly engineered and designed Firebird marks the first major change in the Pontiac sports car since 1982 when the third generation was born. The first Firebird bowed in 1967 followed by the second generation Pontiac sports car in 1970.

"The car has an international design flavor to it," said Jack Folden, Pontiac Exterior Studio II design chief, "and yet it very much says, 'I'm an American and proud of it.'"

The new design was greatly influenced by the 1988 Pontiac Banshee concept car.

"We were getting ready to design a whole new generation of image cars for Pontiac," continued Folden, "and we wanted to test the waters. With Banshee, we made a statement about what the next generation of Firebird might look like. The overwhelming positive public reaction told us to go for it."

"We were able to do more flexible shapes thanks to the new Firebird's reinforced plastic outer skins," said Folden. "The use of plastics gave us more freedom to twist and flow the surfaces together in ways we never could before. A lot of the shaping of the door, for instance, would have been very difficult in sheet metal. We couldn't have gotten that plan view -- that pinched-in, wasp-waisted look -- without the use of these materials."

The result is a distinctive, smoothly-contoured three-model lineup -- from the sleek and sophisticated looking Coupe and Formula with integrated rear decklid spoiler, to the bold and aggressive looking Trans Am distinguished by specific front and rear fascias, fog lamps, rocker panel extensions and TA-specific rear decklid spoiler.

All models feature improved structure, resulting in a tighter-feeling, quieter street machine than ever before. The structure was improved by reducing stress concentrations -- one of the causes of a poorly performing structure. This not only makes the vehicle structure very efficient, it also minimizes any cracking during the life of the vehicle.

A passenger side air bag (supplemental inflatable restraint) -- housed just above the new-for-93 locking glove compartment -- is also standard as well as Delco ABS VI anti-lock brakes. The ABS system includes an "ABS INOP" lamp that illuminates momentarily when the ignition is activated, letting the driver know that the accident avoidance system is operational. A "LOW TRAC" lamp illuminates when the system is actually in use. The lamp also illuminates if the system requires service.

Firebird's increased safety and security content along with a damage-resistant exterior and estimated five percent reduction in replacement part costs should help take a bite out of insurance premiums Firebird owners traditionally pay. For dual air bags alone, the leading insurance carriers in the country provide between 30 to 60 percent personal injury discounts.

The Firebird Coupe is powered by the 160 hp 3.4 liter V6 that delivers 20 more horsepower and 20 more ft-lb of torque than the 3.1-liter V6 used in the former design -- and it does it with improved fuel economy.

Estimated fuel economy for the 3.4-liter engine mated to the standard five-speed manual transmission is 19 mpg city, 28 mpg highway -- a two mpg city and one mpg EPA-estimated highway improvement. With the available four-speed automatic, fuel economy improves one mpg in both city and highway EPA-estimated mileage.

The new Firebird engine also provides better overall engine performance due in part to its direct ignition and sequential fuel injection systems.

In all models, both V6 and V8 powerplants are partially tucked under the steeply raked windshield, yet, engine serviceability is enhanced in 1993. Although three of the spark plugs are covered by the windshield they can easily be changed from underneath the car. In addition, all the 5.7 liter's plugs only need to be replaced every 100,000 miles.

All other engine componentry that needs to be serviced regularly is easily accessible. In addition, if a major repair needs to be made, the engine can be lowered from its compartment by removing just six bolts.

Firebird's serviceability has also been enhanced through streamlined repair procedures that expedite the time it takes to perform repairs as a result of easily removable exterior panels, the accessibility of body joints, center point of vehicle identification and modular replacement parts.

Don't let frozen pipes melt your spirit

Every year Old Man Winter wreaks havoc in thousands of homes across the country when frozen pipes burst, spewing thousands of gallons of water on floors, walls, furniture and appliances.

Homes of absent holiday vacationers are especially susceptible to this disaster, according to the nation's largest insurer.

"The last thing anyone wants when they return from a holiday trip is to find their home full of water because their water pipes have frozen and burst," said Dean Flesner, vice-president for State Farm Fire and Casualty Company.

Frozen pipe damage occurs most often in warm-weather climates where pipes typically aren't installed or insulated for protection from cold air.

According to Flesner, it's often easy to keep pipes from freezing. Here are a few tips:

- Leave the heat on and set no lower than 55 degrees. If no one will be home for several days, have someone check the home daily to make sure the heat is on.

- Open cabinet doors under sinks on outside walls to let in warm air.

- Insulate pipes most susceptible to freezing. Typically, these are near outer walls, in crawl spaces and in the attic.

- Disconnect all garden hoses. If there is an indoor valve, shut off and drain the water supply to outdoor faucets.

- If pipes do freeze, don't try to thaw a pipe with an open flame or torch. Be careful of electric shock in areas of standing water.

- Make sure all family members know the location of the home's water shut-off valve. If a pipe bursts, shutting off the water promptly can help minimize damage.

In the past 10 years, State Farm has paid its policyholders more than $600 million in frozen pipe claims, according to Flesner.

Having a Valentine's Day party for the kids

When party planner Beth Whittaker throws a children's Valentine's Day Party, she pulls out all the stops - but she keeps an eye on the number of invitees and, once the party has started, an eye on the clock.

"Absolutely no more than 10 children and no more than an hour and a half in length is the formula for any successful children's party," said Whittaker, who has been a professional party planner for over 25 years.

Valentine's Day Party ideas:

1. Before the children arrive, attach strips of 1/2-inch wide red and white ribbon to the ceiling, letting them hang down to the height of the children. During the party, let the children help decorate by having them cut out colored hearts and attaching them to the ribbons.

2. Make large paper valentines and pin them over the hearts of each child. Write the name of the child on the paper heart, then, using a Polaroid instant camera, take a photo of the child. Give the instant photo to the child as a take-home party favor.

3. Idea for a fun Valentine's Day party game: Assign each child the task of taking an instant photo of a portion of the room which contains a red object. (Before the party, make sure several red objects - candles, pillows, books, fresh apples, candy hearts - are in place.) Let the child show his or her instant photo to the others and have the other children try to find the red object in the photo. When the object has been found, the child who took the photo can write the name of the object at the bottom of the instant photo.

4. Do ahead idea for serving "Valentine Mystery Cubes." Prepare Cherry Flavored Kool-Aid according to package directions. Pour into ice cube tray. Prior to freezing, drop a strawberry into one cube. Place tray in freezer and freeze. During party, drop two cubes into each serving of Kool-Aid. Inform the children that the one finding the strawberry in the center of his or her cube will win a special prize.

5. Give each child a supply of red and white construction paper, aluminum foil wrap, paper doilies and gummed hearts. Let them make one special valentine.

6. Give one plain cupcake to each child. Make available white icing and a supply of hard cinnamon candies. Let the children decorate the cupcakes. Have each child pose with his or her cupcake - before it is eaten! - and take an instant photo.

Middlesex East insertion day changes for daily membership

Effective with next week's edition, The Middlesex East Supplement will appear in the Daily Times Chronicle and the Daily News Mercury on Wednesdays instead of Thursdays. All weekly papers including the North Reading Transcript, the Stoneham Independent, the Lynnfield Production scheduling and advertiser requests promoted the adjustment. Middlesex East Supplement is delivered to 44,000 subscribers each week in 13 communities.

Adults and children are welcome to attend at the price of $15 a ticket. The price includes hot and cold appetizers, the fashion show and dessert and coffee. There will also be a raffle table with many donations from businesses in the community.

Jazz band plays Friday

The New Black Eagle Jazz Band, well-known in the area for its unique style of dixieland jazz, will give a concert on Saturday, February 6 at 7:30 p.m. in the Doherty School Auditorium, Bartlett St., Andover. The Unitarian Universalist Church of Andover is sponsoring the concert which will benefit three area charities: Si Se Puede, Summer Start, and Bread and Roses.

The New Black Eagle Jazz Band had its origins in the late 1970s, and the UU Church of Andover hosted one of its first public appearances. Over the years, the popularity of the band has required a move to larger quarters at Doherty.

Si Se Puede is a Lawrence organization which fosters activities for area children. Summer Start, based on the national Head Start program, is designed to develop socialization skills in children and teach parenting skills to adults. The UU Church of Andover sponsored a Summer Start program in its building on Locke Street for the first time during the summer of 1992, providing many volunteers.

Tickets are $12.50 in advance, $15 at the door. For more information, call Don Mulvey, (508) 475-2411 or the church office (mornings) at (508) 475-4454.

Jazz Quartet in Stoneham

Steve Wark and his jazz quartet will be appearing in the sanctuary of The First Congregational Church in Stoneham on Sunday, February 7th at 3 p.m. playing works of Ellington, Porter and Gershwin.

This benefit concert, to help with the church deficit, is being presented by the Music Committee of the church. Tickets are $5 for adults and $2.50 for students. For reservations please call (617) 622-6351 or (617) 438-7961.
